The American Psychological Association (APA) Ad Hoc Committee on Psychology and AIDS (COPA) is seeking nominations for three new members whose term will begin on January 1, 2014 and end on December 31, 2017.

The mission of COPA, an ad hoc committee that reports to the Board for the Advancement of Psychology in the Public Interest (BAPPI), is to guide the development and implementation of APA’s organizational responses to the HIV/AIDS epidemic.

Prospective Nominees

COPA members must be APA members and they are required to attend two, face-to-face meetings per year in Washington, DC, with expenses reimbursed by APA, and to participate in monthly conference calls. Between meetings, members are expected to devote a substantial portion of time to COPA projects, provide consultation to APA Office on AIDS staff, and participate in advocacy activities as needed. Each of the face-to-face meetings begins on a Friday morning at 8:30 a.m. and ends on Sunday morning at noon. On average, in addition to the time associated with the one-hour monthly conference calls and the time associated with the two face-to-face meetings each year, members spend approximately two to four hours per month on COPA business.

Candidates should have demonstrated expertise in dealing with HIV/AIDS issues as a researcher, practitioner, educator, and/or policy advocate. COPA seeks to involve a diverse group of psychologists, including persons of color, persons self-identified as LGBT, and individuals who are living with HIV. At least one position will be filled by an early career psychologist (10 years or less since doctoral degree). COPA is particularly interested in candidates with expertise in the following areas: (1) HIV prevention and care for gay, bisexual, other men who have sex with men and transgender populations; (2) public health aspects of HIV (3) clinical aspects of HIV/AIDS; (4) knowledge of emerging biomedical technologies and their interface with behavioral interventions; and/or (5) syndemic aspects of HIV/AIDS (e.g., low socioeconomic status, severe mental illness, substance use, trauma).

APPENDIX C: NBI 31C (DRAFT)

- NBI: 31C Engaging New Talent in Governance

- We applaud the Association’s efforts to promote early career psychologists (ECPs) and new members entering governance, as ECPs and those new to governance often provide a unique perspective and skill set. Importantly, ECPs are underrepresented in governance, comprising approximately 20% of membership but less than 1% of governance, thus the Association has an opportunity to cultivate ECPs into future leaders.

- While we initially supported that ECPs running for governance positions be identified with an asterisk, we are concerned about potential unintended consequences that ECPs would be perceived as being less qualified than others on the ballot. As such, we have reconsidered this item, and with guidance from others in governance, now propose that each Board and Committee designate one of their existing positions as an ECP position. This revised proposal capitalizes on beneficial experiences of existing boards and committees (e.g., Committee on Aging (CONA)) that already have one designated position. This change has no fiscal implications, and it would only affect each board and committee once every three years. Further, this change would not expand the size of board and committees, but would assure inclusion of ECP members, many of whom are also new to governance.

- This revised proposal that each Board and Committee designate one of their existing positions as an ECP position furthers two of the APA’s Strategic Initiatives. Specifically, it furthers Initiative 1 to improve APA business models, member communications and the convention to increase member engagement, and Initiative 5 to Expand opportunities for graduate education and continued professional development for psychologists. This proposal will help to engage the early career constituency, further their development as leaders, and help to ensure the growth and advancement of psychology.
